FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

Poor Old Tip.
"What are the lions roarin' for?" said the monkey in his cage.
"They're dreading what they've got to see," said the leopard in a rage.
"What makes you change your spots so quick?" said the monkey in his cage.
"It's nervous dread as causes it," said the leopard in a rage.
"For they've given old Tip pizen; they are dosin' him today.
His legs are growin' weaker, and his hide is gettin' gray.
His eyes have lost their twinkie, and he'll never must eat hay.
For they're dosin' Tip, they're dosin' him with pizen."

"I once was fastened near to him," said the monkey in his cage.
"His trunk is checked for far away," said the leopard in a rage.
"We drank our water from one tank," said the monkey in his cage.
"The bitter drink he had today," said the leopard in a rage.
"For they've given old Tip pizen; yes, pizen by the pound.
"Cause he killed a lot of keepers that was always hangin' round.
And he must now be treated like a little yelpin' hound.
So they're dosin' Tip, they're dosin' him with pizen."

"What's that so white—so gleamin' white?" said the monkey in his cage.
"It is his tusks they've torn away," said the leopard in a rage.
"What's that so queer there on the ground?" said the monkey in his cage.
"It's poor Tip's hide they've just pulled off," said the leopard in a rage.
"For they've given old Tip pizen. Can't you hear the puma's whine?
Can't you see the wolves a-fightin' like when they go to dine?
They'll fix his bones and hide up in a manner mighty fine
After dosin' Tip—a-dosin' him with pizen."
—Christian Work.

A Maginty.
These funny little tumbler seldom fail to amuse. To make one, procure a glass marble a little larger than a walnut. Take a white linen cuff and cut a piece of two inches wide and five long. On this point or draw a face. Bend it round and sew the two ends together. In one end sew with double linen thread a piece of black ladies' cloth or any heavy cloth by overhanding the edges together. Put the marble in, and over the other end sew securely a little plush circle, fulling it on, for a cap. Tie a piece of baby ribbon about it, with a smart bow at the back. From the same material as you have in the other end cut two pieces an inch wide and five long, and overhand the two long sides together. Cut out from an old kid glove two feet and sew to the bottom of each side and sew the legs thus made to the middle of the cloth end of the cuff. From white woolen material cut a piece for a vest and sew around the lower part of the cuff. Make a swallowtail coat from yellow felt and sew over the vest, with pearl buttons, the size that comes on gloves, down the front and two at the back. From the same material as the coat overhand a long piece for the arms as you did for the legs and cut out hands from the gloves, or these arms may be made in one piece and fastened to the body across the back. The "Maginty" is finished.

To make him perform, with his queer tumbling and funny little kicks, place the ironing board with one end on the arm of a rocking chair, so that it does not slant too much and set "Mr. Maginty" at the top. He will at once tumble head over heels to the bottom and roll and kick for you when he reaches it. —Minneapolis Housekeeper.

Misplaced Charity.
The rays of a May day sun were shining brightly along Chestnut street as a tall and stately girl came meandering down the sidewalk. She wore a gold rimmed pair of smoked glasses to protect her vision, while in front of her at the end of a cord wandered a gayly caparisoned pug dog, "that was just too sweet for anything."

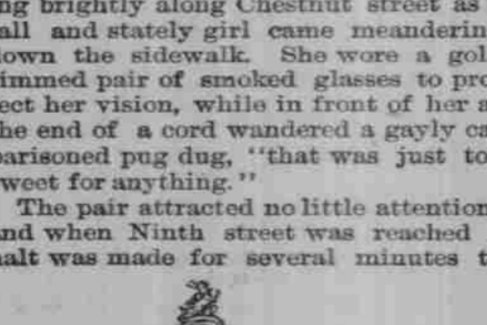

The pair attracted no little attention, and when Ninth street was reached a halt was made for several minutes to avoid the passing crowd, when a bright little boy stepped up to the lady with a benevolent look on his face, and reaching out his hand, which contained a brand new silver dime, said:

"Please, ma'am, won't you take this? Mamma said I must be kind to the blind people." With a look of disdain and a shrug of the shoulders the promenade and her dog turned to the opposite side of the street, while a bootblack bawled out:

"Sonny, that gal isn't blind. She's a dudelet." —Philadelphia Press.

Wisdom of Childhood.
A little 3-year-old girl, while her mother was trying to get her to sleep, became interested in some noise. She was told that it was caused by a cricket, when she sagely observed:

"Mamma, I think he ought to be oiled." —Pearson's Weekly.

SUITS FOR LITTLE BOYS

The suit in the center is of dark blue velveta, Tuxedo front jacket and frilled blouse shirt. The one at the right is a snuff brown cloth suit with light brown in-creasable revers. The jacket is Eton shape. The left central figure is a Scotch plaid kilt suit with white blouse and short jacket. The figure on the left shows a dark blue serge suit with white silk revers and white blouse shirt. These suits are all for very young boys.

NEW ORGANIZATION OF JEWESSES.

Its Objects Are Religious, Philanthropic and Educational.

The officers of the recently formed national council of Jewish women have adopted measures to promote the extension of the important work which they have undertaken, through which it is hoped that the membership of the council will be greatly enlarged and its usefulness advanced. All these officers belong to the sex in whose behalf the body has been formed and are well fitted for the performance of the duties to which they have been assigned. The president is Mrs. Henry Solomon. There are vice presidents for the states of the Union, and there are committees for such purposes as are designated in their respective titles. All business is transacted under a constitution which has been described as a model of comprehensiveness and precision. The work of organizing local sections in accordance with its provisions has been begun, and it is believed that before the end of the year they will be numbered by the hundred, and that all parts of the country will be represented in the national council. Each section is required to hold regular meetings and make monthly reports, and is also required to carry into practice the plans of the council's committee on religion and the committee on philanthropy. It is recommended that a paper on some topic relating to Judaism shall be read at each of the meetings. Here are some of the topics chosen by one of the sections under advice of the national board: "Women in Israel," "The Study of the Bible," "College Settlements," "Personal Service in Philanthropic Work."

Jewesses of every age in life, whether rich or poor, are invited to membership in the body, so that the power and pleasure of union among Jewish women may be used in a way it has never before been used. The expressed and fundamental object of the council is the advancement of an organic union for the advancement of the common interests of all members, for general service in behalf of Judaism and for the prosecution of philanthropic works under a methodical system.

"We Jewish women," says the preamble to the constitution, "sincerely believing that a closer fellowship, a greater unity of thought and purpose and a nobler accomplishment will result from a widespread organization, do therefore band ourselves together in a union to further the best and highest interests of humanity in fields religious, philanthropic and educational." There is no doubt that if 50,000 of the Jewesses of the United States shall thus co-operate in behalf of the purposes here indicated they will exercise a public influence that cannot be confined within the bounds of Judaism. The Jewish women of New York, who already have many particular organizations for the promotion of good works, possess a spirit which enables them to carry on their business with success and in harmony.

Conventions of the national council of Jewish women are to be held biannually under the call of the board of directors, and each section will be there represented by one delegate at large and one for every 50 members.

A good number of the rabbis in different parts of the country have expressed their approval of the organization of the council, the membership of which desire to render service advantageous to the synagogue, and to perform work supplementary to that of the rabbinate. The Chicago section has received especial favor from the rabbis there. —New York Sun.

A Princess and a Nun.
A rumor that Princess Clementine, the youngest daughter of the king and queen of the Belgians, contemplates taking the veil appears to be fully confirmed. Her decision is said to have been arrived at three years ago, when her cousin, Prince Baldwin of Flanders, to whom she was engaged, died so suddenly of fever. She kept her resolve secret until she came of age last year, but she has never swerved from it, nor can she be moved to reconsider a determination which will consign to a convent one of the most charming, accomplished and wealthy princesses in Europe. The utmost concession that she was induced to make was the postponement of her novitiate until after the wedding of Princess Josephine. —Antwerp Letter.

A Scientific Princess.

One of the most noted travelers in Germany is Princess Therese, the only daughter of the Bavarian regent. She is a woman of scientific attainments and owes her election to the Bavarian Academy of Science to the books which she has published concerning her journeys. A few weeks ago the princess consented to exhibit in the old court house of Munich the valuable collections which she has made in her travels. They have naturally attracted widespread attention. —Berlin Journal.

Helen Cody Wetmore's Point.
A woman's column is edited by Helen Cody Wetmore in the Duluth Press. In a recent issue it makes the following point: If men believe what they say, that "women do not want to vote," why bar the privilege against them? We do not fence the cornfields because we think the cattle will not eat the corn, but because we know they will.

To Be Honorary President.
Mrs. Minnie Sherman Fitch, wife of Lieutenant F. W. Fitch of Pittsburg, and oldest daughter of General W. T. Sherman, is to be the honorary president of all the managers and committees of ladies appointed in connection with the coming G. A. R. encampment.

A Suggestion.
We advise every one of the antisuffrage ladies to read John Stuart Mill's little book on "The Subjection of Women." Let them read that attentively, and they will stop talking so much nonsense. —Albany Times.

Not to Touch Water.
The Salesman (in the dry goods store)—Yes, this is a very pretty piece of goods, but to be honest about it I must tell you that it will not wash.

The Fair Purchaser—Oh, that doesn't matter. I only want it for a bathing suit anyway. —Chicago Record.

Disingenuous.
"Come," commanded the plump damsel with the bleached hair.
"Charmed, I'm sure," rejoined the largest snake in the box hypocritically. —Detroit Tribune.

Dry Pools.
"Mamma, is papa a good swimmer?"
"Not that I am aware of. Why?"
"Well, I heard him say he was in four pools yesterday." —Arkansas Traveler.

Of Little Faith.
Father—No sense in buying kites. If you want a kite, I will make you one.
Son (doubtfully)—But I want one that will fly. —Good News.

She Knew One.
He—Yes, I know two men I thoroughly admire.
She—Indeed! Who's the other one? —Life.

Good Advice.

Waiter—What'll you have?
Rube Jayseed—Waal, I don't know which ter take, whether roast beef, veal or mutton.
Waiter—Take corn beef hash, and yer'll get ther whole lot.—Truth.
